

Tourist Information Points (generally known as PITs, for their acronym in Spanish) are spaces destined to provide, both local and foreign visitors, with free tourist information on a specific destination. PITs are located on strategic points of the cities and have a distinctive red “I”; their bilingual (Spanish and English) staff is professionally trained to take care of all tourist related concerns, and to deliver full and trustworthy information on the tourist attractions of a given destination, as well as on the cultural, sports, and recreational activities of the city.
