Montería has golf courses suitable for professional playing.

Montería: peace and rest as a companion to a good game

Montería is the capital of the department of Córdoba. It is located in the north east of the country, on the banks of the Sinú River, and is therefore known as the Pearl of the Sinú. It is also an important commercial and university center. Montería has a warm tropical climate, with an annual dry season and a rainy season. The city's average annual temperature is 32°C.

Montería allows golfers to improve their game while they play.

The main activities in the city are cattle ranching and agriculture, both nurtured by the fertile land.

Golf in this city is based around enjoying the scenery and having a friendly game allowing every player to practice and improve their game in a peaceful and relaxing environment.
