

Bogota landscape

A cosmopolitan city, World Book Capital 2007, an average temperature of 16° C, and 2,600 meters closer to the stars are a good choice of words for describing Bogota. Located on a high plateau on the Andes Mountains, it is the main city in the country, the seat of the National Government, and a destination par excellence for congresses and conventions. Modern and classical structures intertwine the frenzy of this capital city with the placid natural scenery that surrounds it in places like Paipa and Sochagota.
